Ricardo Levente Ricardo Levente (born; 1980) from Santiago, Chile, is a contemporary jazz composer, saxophonist and conductor. He studied classical music at the Universidad Catolica de Valparaíso, and jazz at the Universidad de Chile and the Universidad de Valparaíso. As a jazz pianist, he has collaborated and performed with several bands such as Grupo Luz, the MCV Quintet, and Beethoven He plays saxophone, piano, and conducts. Ricardo Levente's music is characterised by the solide and flexible improvisation, close to the Jazz of the third wave; with a great presence of the melodies, the song and the social concordances of the sound image. It has been performed around the world, and several of his pieces have been broadcast on Chilean radio and TV. Ricardo is the first Chilean author in the list of most downloaded authors on the website www.sheetmusicclassics.com (ranked 18); his song "You're A Stream" scored two top 10 places in a competition held by the Austral-Argentine Society of Music Composition (AASMC), in Buenos Aires, 2008. This text was originally published at Ricardo's daughter is Felipe Zamorano, a singer and composer. He is

Innovation, evolution, and the path to a sustainable world. Every country has to do more to create greener and more sustainable cities, says Arata Ikegami
DETROIT, March 15, 2012 -- In a world of increasing urbanization and global economic growth, there is no doubt that cities are an important driver of sustainable global development. However, for almost 200 years now cities have predominantly been greening and making sustainable, using natural and green resources for development purposes while growing economies. This pattern of green urbanization and economic growth is no longer sustainable. Cities
