As a result, the authority didn't find any amount directly associated with the taxpayer, and thus couldn't confirm or deny the alleged amount. The US tax authorities have not yet received any notification from the Malaysian Embassy regarding the delayed tax refund for the alleged amount of US$1.1m made by Dr. George Soros, and he hasn't received a message from the embassy either. Thus, the US tax authorities cannot verify the tax refund amount if it is indeed true. The State Investment Board (BIA) has now put all sorts of restrictions on the fund while efforts were on to collect the whole amount. The new restrictions state that the fund is not allowed to go into any investment, and it cannot move money from one fund to another. The fund has also been prohibited from buying assets that are not financial related, as it uses the taxpayers' money. On the other hand, the law also gives BIA the power to take necessary actions including seizing the assets, if the restrictions are not followed. "It means that the fund is not allowed to go into any investments, so it cannot be used for any purpose other than the transfer of small amounts of money from one person to another," a source told The Star Online when contacted recently. However, the source added that BIA will only be able to proceed with the collection if the monies are seized before the lawsuits are finalized. Otherwise, the fund will have no choice but to sue the people who allegedly owed it money. BIA had previously released the first seizure order on the fund in June 2013 for an amount of RM3.6 million. A total of five seizure orders were issued in October, October, November, December and December 2013. However, the monies were only seized and not collected as the action didn't go through any court's ruling. "The balance of the amount is not seized yet. The five seizure orders were
