When I tried the 'Orange Vocoder' and I turned up the settings for the full pro version, it was clear that the EQ was pretty much all I needed. I tried the Orange Vocoder again and it has a much more characteristic sound than the Original Vocoder (by Zynaptiq). The Orange Vocoder is a minimalistic VST audio effect plugin with synthetic voice that simulates a humanoid vocal tract. The Orange Vocoder also takes input from an audio track. The Orange Vocoder uses a 7-band parametric EQ and 6 modulation filters to provide a natural sounding voice with realistic controls and an intuitive interface. The Orange Vocoder has 12 parameter knobs and 12 envelopes, plus a bank switching and preset option. Its 12-band parametric EQ provides presets for the following frequencies: 20 Hz to 200 Hz, 200 Hz to 10 kHz, 400 Hz to 10 kHz and 2 kHz to 20 kHz. The Orange Vocoder was originally released by the sonoritySoft GmbH together with Zynaptiq, Inc., in September 2016. Its main aim was to simulate an advanced vocal training method. Orange Vocoder is free to use for both 32 bit and 64 bit versions. On Linux, run: $ cd /Makefile $ make $ make install From Now on, you 82138339de
