Q: RSA parameterization using Pentaho I use the RSA function in pentaho to generate public and private key, but my question is what should i choose for P, Q, DP and DQ? In the documentation its shows some examples for dp and dq, but doesnt show how to generate those numbers. A: For generating secret key: Use lets say randoms from here: (For public key generator: Use generator from here: (For parameters generation: Use your own algorithm for generating parameters. Or use some standard algorithm and then just change P, Q, Dp, Dq for AES (AES()) parameters. In that case, just generate private key and public key with new parameters for AES. From my experience, I suggest to use sha1, sha256 and sha512 for SHA and for AES(AES()) 512-bit in that case. Autonomous vehicles may be capable of navigating autonomously through a driving environment that includes roadway lanes. A lane may include a center line in a painted or unpainted portion of the roadway, a shoulder, or some combination thereof. As such, a lane may include the center line, lane markings of some kind, guardrails, and/or an absence of guardrails. An autonomous vehicle may be capable of identifying lanes in which the vehicle is capable of traveling autonomously without excessive risk to the vehicle. For example, a vehicle that has a lane centered laser measuring a headway distance between the vehicle and a forward vehicle in a lane may be capable of traveling autonomously to a lane to the left of an adjacent lane in which the vehicle is capable of traveling autonomously without exceeding a maximum comfortable vehicle speed of the autonomous vehicle. An autonomous vehicle may be capable of traveling autonomously in a lane if a forward object detected in front of the autonomous vehicle is outside the range of safety (e.g., the forward object is too close to the vehicle to be safely passed without collision). An autonomous vehicle may include a camera for observing the driving environment of the autonomous vehicle. The camera may be capable of detecting road signs and lane lines. A lane may include a center line in a painted or unpainted portion of the roadway, lane markings of some kind, guardrails, and/or an absence of guardrails. A lane may be a boundary of a driving environment in which the vehicle may travel autonomously. The camera may be able to differentiate between a lane and another object, to name a few examples. Q: How to make this simple drop down menu responsive?
