The Bulldogs prop, who is already short of a first-choice front row, will sit out this week's clash against the Wests Tigers in Newcastle, depending on how he reacts following his calf injury in last weekend's 24-6 win over the Canterbury Bulldogs. Kleinleinlein will probably make a decision on a few other players over the next two-to-three weeks, including back-rower Ben Kay (ankle) and good-handling centre Greg Eastwood (knee), as the club prepares for the second half of its season. While the Gold Coast Titans will start the month of April on the back of five straight losses, in what has been a young and inexperienced year for the Queensland club. But it's the Tigers who have the most experienced line-up, with centre Tim Moltzen, lock Ryan Hoffman and prop
