The new set of on-field AI attacks has been inspired by “the unpredictability of the real game, with emergent football tactics that have the AI daring and skilful players into incredible goals and passing moves.” The attacking AI will be more unpredictable than ever, with players running off the ball in unplanned ways and – when there is space to do so – will make smart off-the-ball runs instead of hoofing it long. Players will be able to create their own tactics and strategy using Manage a team in the new freeform “Create a Team” mode, just like in previous iterations of the series. Players can set their formation, ensure their style of play, integrate different roles and details, as well as change the tempo and speed of the game. FIFA 22 introduces a brand new Dynamic Tactics AI, which provides the player with five different play styles, five different formations and ten pre-programmed tactics, according to their playing style. Players can use these tactics in the “In The Game” and “Create a Team” modes. The Dynamic AI system can be Customised and refined to reflect players’ and tactics, further improving the playing experience. A new career mode, Career Day, allows players to build their own career and then take on the role of the player in league matches, national cups, or training matches. Players will also be able to boost their skills and attributes in-game, including training, where the player can develop their individual attributes. As with the previous versions, FIFA 22 will be played in its traditional 11 a-side format with a variety of short and long-distance passing, dribbling, shooting, and tackling scenarios. The controls system has also been upgraded from FIFA 17. The skill passing system, in particular, has been made more responsive and reliable, adding “an improved touch and timing system in mid-air and changed the execution of crosses, through balls and Dribbles.” Fans can also expect a stronger player profile editor, better goal animations and new crowds. The pre-game, in-match and post-game improvements are all there, with the option to referee matches either by the book or allow for a more physical and realistic style of refereeing. The 2019 edition of the EA SPORTS FIFA World Cup™ is kicking off this week, and EA SPORTS has created a new “World Cup 2.0.

Features Key:

- INTRIGUING PLAYER MOTION: Real-life player data is collected from a complete, high-intensity football match. Leave the camera still, and the movements of the 22 real-life players are passed through a custom camera system to deliver a rich and authentic football simulation.
- PLAYER PRODUCTIVITY: The most popular match types in the previous FIFA games have been improved: from quick play challenges in FIFA Ultimate Team mode to fast, high intensity sprints in Career mode.

- CAMERA AT ITS PEAK: Want to catch a moment with your favourite player? Or sprint with them? The new camera moves smoothly and intuitively to incorporate the needs of intuitive playmaking, whether in the penalty box, on the wing or wherever you spot the game happening. FIFA 16 refined the control and responsiveness of the camera, and even the new 2.0 engine goes a step further.
- GAME BALANCE: The new game modes are also an important part of the new content strategy for FIFA Ultimate Team. A new rewards system will give you your fair share of rewards for your game play.
- DYNAMIC CITY MODELS: With the new visual graphics engine and the new physics engine, the new city models are even more realistic, with more landmark and crowd effects. Dynamic crowds and billboards sway and respond to team behaviour.
- FALLING STARS Improved through the integration of player tracking data. During set pieces, the dynamic performance of every player, based on the realistic ball tracking, can be analyzed and reacts depending on the defensive line or the direction of attack.
- TRAILING LIGHTS: Even on pitch formations, a new light trail will make visible the passing lines of your team, just like on the pitch.
