This is because, not only are the matte-black highlights added to the previously all-white RC30's silver-painted bumpers, but the white-painted side panels are also complemented by black-stitched black B-pillars and black-stitched wheels that take the RC30 from traditional into edgy territory. With its sharper look, the Honda-branded RC30 is a real 'heads up' if you happen to be pulled up alongside in traffic, which is why we wouldn't be surprised if it became an overnight sensation. As part of the "minku" project that Honda Motors Inc. has established under the auspices of its parent company, Honda R&D Co., Ltd., the RC30 car will first be rolled off the assembly lines of Honda's

Kumamoto factory by the end of 2014, and has also been entered into the production race that is challenging ordinary concept cars. This is Honda's first car to be on the market since the international debut of its hybrid concept "Amaze" back in 2008. It's been an interesting period for Honda. As a company, it's been expressing an upbeat attitude in areas including the areas of driver's cars, such as the Civic,
