nutbolt is your journey through a post apocalyptic wasteland. Your mission is to investigate hazardous areas and to combat threats. In order to reach your destination, you must travel through a series of hazardous areas. The goal of each area is to reach a safe zone, however along the way you will encounter lethal enemies and environmental hazards. Each mission has multiple "variations" based on the locations around you. Every variation comes with its own gameplay style and difficulty. Each variation requires you to think strategically to successfully complete it. The variation rotation ensures that every mission will offer a slightly different gameplay experience. As an example, discovering a hidden tunnel at the end of a mission allows you to interact with objects in an entirely different way. Using a new tunnel could completely change the next mission. You can access these variations from the main menu before starting any mission. Explore a hostile environment. The world of Hydroactive is made of several unique areas, each with its own unique hazards. Every area is procedurally generated, meaning that its basic structure remains the same but the layout of the area is completely different every time the game is played. Rush to safety. Sometimes you may choose not to fight your way to safety. Using a seldom encountered variation, the "Rush to Safety" mission allows you to safely travel through an area by using your grappling hook to swing off ledges and strategically land on small patches of ground. The variation shows up when you press [start] whilst in the area you wish to use it on, it isn't visible in the main menu. You can only use a Rush to Safety variation on a regular mission once. Use tools to increase your power. Throughout your journey Nutbolt will collect a wide range of tools that augment his physical abilities and make traveling through the wasteland a whole lot easier. Each tool has its own powerful effects, some even improve your survival ability. For example, if you find a health pack whilst travelling through a risky area, you can pick it up and get some health instantly. Nutbolt comes with three default tools, but can always receive a fourth tool for free. The default tools are: Heavily armoured vest which improves your resistance to fire and can be equipped for a variety of offensive and defensive uses. Pistol – A standard pistol that can be equipped for close range attacks or used to protect yourself if you're being attacked. Gun with thermal optics – A rifle that extends

But to me, the mind-boggling disconnect isn't in just who has access, but in what they gain access to; the truth of who they are; and their understanding of what they are striving to achieve. Imagine yourself in a car; and on your way to work; how many people you are willing to share where you are going; how many people are comfortable with what they are driving in; are we to always be buddies on this road or only in certain circles? A narrow digital net is a slippery slope. A digital gap is the soul crushing make-believe that if you can't force your self-image on your audience, the opinions of the people

Nyako: Restaurant Tycoon (also known as Nyako Manager or Nyako The Restaurant Game) is a 2013 tower defense game developed by Tata Elxsi and published by ShubinSoft. Unlike most tower defense games where the player must use a wide variety of weapons to defend their bases, Nyako: Restaurant Tycoon requires the player to defend only one base from a wide selection of fast food restaurant-themed attackers. Gameplay As in the majority of tower defense games, the player takes the role of a character attempting to protect a base. The base is represented by a 7×7 array of square tiles on a single-screen interface. The goal is to fill the base with enemies, which can be achieved by capturing all enemies or blocking them from obtaining their usual spawning points. There are four game modes, corresponding to the four base types that can be built. Each game begins by selecting the base type and the level. In addition to regular enemies, later levels also contain special tyrants which are armed with proton cannons (which shoot enemy projectiles). More powerful tyrants become available at higher levels. There are also relics (which instantly replenish the health of enemies) and Mana Potions, represented by glowing cubes, which heal the player. In the first game mode, the player must protect a cereals box. The boxes are distributed across the playing field. To do this, the player must send food platoons (including attack platoons) to the boxes. Platoons can be sent from a platooning area by clicking and selecting the box from which they are to be sent. Platooning is necessary to defeat the tyrants; attacks are weaker when attacking from a distance. As the player defeats tyrants they increase in strength. As tyrants are defeated, further tyrants come online. The player can also destroy tyrants with non-food platoons. The order in which tyrants are taken over depends on their level, and can be controlled by assigning them to a defense rank (from which there is no escape if the tyrants take over due to a lack of need for your recruits) and by the player's relative strength. The player can also activate their selected defense rank for the level. The slots on the defense rank can be used to show the pitch in which a platoon needs to be launched, or to target a specific tyrants. Once the pitch is selected, and the tyrants are set
