Beta 1.0.3 Our logic is that the issue should go away if the serial number in rev.ini no longer matches the serial number of the individual product key. In the past, the two would be identical. There have been a variety of suggestions on how to handle this, including letting users see which component needs the update. As I said before, most of them can be handled by the use of a custom permission, a whitelist, or not even granting access to the product. If a customer service agent thinks that it is necessary to deal with this situation in the code, I'm not sure how you'd go about it. With 40,000+ product keys in use, it wouldn't be a trivial task. A: Honestly, it's because they have to go to a website and enter it in. Joking aside, Valve has already listed another reference on Steam Help: Good news: If your client has a product key embedded in your PC's BIOS, the new Steam client will automatically check for updates. This is no longer possible if the product key is hidden in the registry, or a user folder. Bad news: If your product key is in the d0c515b9f4

In your Steam/steamapps/common/Garry's Mod/gmod directory, there should be a file called "rev.ini", which is a text file containing configuration details. Your server needs to read this file before it can be useful, so you will need to place the rev.ini file in the gmod directory. Note that in the Steam app, you may need to double-click on the file to be able to open it. If you get permission denied, run Steam as an administrator. . . . . Here is the problem. I try to download client to cp using this client and this rev.ini file and I get a error message "Authentication required, please re-select client 1" Every time I try to download the client I get this message, I reseted cmgr and cache many times and I tried to uninstall the client and reinstall many times. I tried to run firewall enable also but nothing happened but I got this error. A: Well I read the link and I checked the code and replace it. I checked the error message and it give the error like this: Authentication required, please re-select client 1 So I think the key is this error! So I replace it, and the error message gone, the download worked fine and I can continue the download process using clantag and specify this rev.ini.
