TublerVR is the first ever game to use only simple touch interactions as the input method and no buttons are necessary. This is the TublerVR game for virtual reality without the need of any additional equipment (like a Gear VR or a HTC Vive). Even your mobile phone is sufficient. Just make sure that you have an oculus go or a Google cardboard in order to be able to play the game! In this version, there are two gameplay modes, for more see the official website. Gameplay 1 (head mounted): Play through the tubler mushroom adventure all by yourself. You'll have to overcome the obstacles, solve the puzzles and place the tublers over your head.

You will be able to get the time slowed down and will be able to move around freely without any additional equipment. Gameplay 2 (free moving): This gameplay mode will be playable only via a HTC controller or an Xbox controller. You'll have to help the tublers to cross the bridges. Game controls: Move around by swiping along the vertical touch bars or use the buttons of your controller. Control the tublers with a simple touch at the touch pads. Touch/select a switch to connect two tublers or to activate the switches on the poles. Why Use Touch instead of Buttons? In a normal touch screen the finger gets in contact with the screen and you can read the information there. With a normal smartphone, this would be difficult because of the curve of the screen. As well, this type of screen deforms easily. This is the reason why buttons are used on mobile devices instead. We worked out a way where the touch screen is flat, deforms well and can be used without additional equipment. I'm not going to explain how the whole game works in further detail, this can be seen in the video on our website. Also, there are plans for a normal mode and a non-virtual reality version as well. A: I'm going to take a stab in the dark here. Are you doing it wrong or is the button based game meant to be played on a device using a joystick instead of buttons? Good luck with your game. Monday, July 14, 2007 Today I decided to revisit The Kit Kat Klub Cafe. I had first visited the cafe during one of my previous trips to Masia where I had tried their assorted yoghurt! I was very keen to taste their desserts

* Accompanied with reference images. * As you play through the pack you may just find it to be helpful. * If this is the case be sure to comment on your use of it. Thanks for all those who play games and make games. PRESS RELEASE - Wolfire Games (developers of Dwarf Fortress, Overgrowth and other great games) today announced the release of the Super Retro World, a pack of tiles, documents and reference images for aspiring game creators to create a retro-inspired world for their own games. The Super Retro World contains 5 themed tilesets for maps, locations and other assets which are compatible with a variety of game engines, including RPG Maker. The pack contains reference illustrations for famous landmarks and retro-inspired equipment as well as a set of exotic locales and cultures including coastal town vibes. The Super Retro World includes English, Thai, and other versions of the tilesets as well as original tiles with translatable text. "The Super Retro World provides a smart mix of all of our current favorites and adds new pieces of the retro look" said John Georgeson, Creative Director at Wolfire Games. "As we create and play we find these pieces to be useful, and this pack will be great for new creators who are just getting started. We hope you'll enjoy these in your own work." "The Super Retro World includes a mix of our favorite neon and more traditional retro styles, which can be used in a variety of games," said Randel Anderson, creator and founder of the Super Retro World. "We hope this includes a lot of useful information for game developers to find inspiration and to mix the styles in their own work." The Super Retro World will be available for purchase on Monday, June 24, 2015 for $10 USD or equivalent from the official support section on the official website. For more information about how to purchase it or the pack, please visit About Wolfire Wolfire Games is a virtual studio, where we hire some of the most talented artists and designers from around the world to make their passion project. Our team includes authors, musicians, game designers, programmers, artists, animators, testers, sound designers, quality assurance, system and project managers. We aim to create experiences that are both rich and deep, with clever and approachable game mechanics that appeal to a wide audience.
