OUR WHY

- We love videogames. We love backpacks. Why not combine them? No matter what the task, there are always backpacks used to help us get it done. That's what this backpack is about. Helping you get what you need done in the tenacity of a game you play and love.
- This Backpack is the culmination of many years of work, an in-depth study of the philosophy that runs through most conventional backpacks, and comes together the best of what we and online communities have developed. We welcome everyone to join us in this journey.
- The Loop series has always been a completely open and collaborative project, born out of the passion for games of a shared community where our strength lies in the conversation between makers and players. That remains as true as ever, and this backpack is truly a reflection of that.

P. Brown Harold P. Brown (born June 30, 1929 – June 8, 2015) was an American painter noted for his vibrant hyper-realistic work. Over the course of his career, he created works of art in different media, including photography, silkscreen, assemblage, and most importantly painting. He has exhibited his work in various solo and group shows for more than three decades, and has had a lasting impact on the practices of science and faith, particularly those that address theological conceptions of time and reality. Early life and education Brown was born in Buffalo, New York. His father, Anthony Brown, was a card-carrying member of the Communist Party, and his mother, Gladys, was a speech-language pathologist. After graduating from Memorial High School he attended the University at Buffalo to study art and minored in science, graduating in 1950. His first job was as a salesman of products for the Schwartz Company, manufacturer of stereo tubes. He then taught sculpture at the School of Visual Arts in New York for a few years. He worked at radio station WMCA for a year but was let go when the station changed the format. Career Start of experimental works In 1961, Brown moved to New Mexico to work full-time in a rehabilitation center. It was during this time that Brown began to experiment with different materials, incorporating them into his paintings and drawings. This mode of thinking has been so profound that he would later be quoted as saying, "inasmuch as the end product of painting and sculpture is permanent, they move me to painting and sculpture". After a year of the experimental works, he returned to New York to continue his career in commercial art. Vivid thinking Brown was a self-taught artist, and his works represent a keen ability to express the emotions and peculiarities of his thinking. He said "emotion hasn't got very much to do with the picture because it is not considered or discussed". Brown said his artwork is more like "real emotions" than the emotions in paintings. Brown's emotional reaction is determined by the thoughts going through his mind, which is represented in an exaggerated way in his paintings. Yellow Paintings After the move to New York, Brown began making

Yellow Paintings, which were hybrid of oil painting and large-format silkscreen prints. Unlike the commercial art that he had been doing, he integrated contemporary imagery and also incorporated

"Birth of Rome" is the first grand strategy video game set during the First Punic War, the Italian wars, the Hannibalic War, and the annexation of Rome. You play as one of the three Roman factions (the consuls, the Senate or the plebs), and you are challenged to build a victorious Roman army that will conquer Italy, and eventually the world, it is your destiny... Rome is a true simulation with a lot of features never seen before in a video game. You can control your armies and fleets on the map, form them in battle to conquer your enemies, re-build them or conscript them to achieve the victory. Or cut the branches of your empire, providing you with more power to spend on land or naval units. Use the diplomacy to woo your allies, or to conclude alliances with them against your enemy. Direct your statesmen to influence the will of your citizens to follow you. Decisions in Birth of Rome are not only historical scenarios that make you head to head with another commander or rival, but will be also a summary of the current crisis of the Roman Empire, with all its possible repercussions. In Birth of Rome, the player must lead his troops in battle and use diplomacy to influence the will of his people and Rome.Held by the highest historical accuracy combined with a layered and deep strategic layer, Birth of Rome offers a unique experience that will challenge and entertain as long as you play it.Birth of Rome is all about warfare. Every decision will impact battles, alliances, armies and ships, but also the wellbeing of your people, your treasury, your cities and your subjects. Every decision will be accompanied by a visual and story telling animation, demonstrating the events that will take place in the gaming world, as well as a musical soundtrack, from ballads to marches, to a gentle and melancholic song to a lively and victorious march.Birth of Rome is historical at its highest level, both in battles and decision making. Historical events, leaders and alliances have been completely recreated. Birth of Rome is a game that keeps the attention but is not a history marathon. Birth of Rome is a game with a full choice of gaming mechanics, rich possibilities and deep simulations to lead your army through combat, warfare and diplomacy. This game is in the news. * "Birth of Rome" is the first computer game that replicates the decision making of a Roman Army in Ancient history. * An unique experience and historical game that anyone can play and rel
