My question got accepted and a couple of the answers are great, but one of them is bad and doesn't seem to be getting any attention. What's the best place for me to edit my post to help get it noticed? In the comments someone suggested copy and pasting it but I know how to do that I'm just wondering how to get it into my post. The wiki is of little help and the link to the editing area says it's for new users and I've been there a while. A: You can edit your post any time, but please make sure you don't make any changes that invalidate any of the answers. If you feel the need to revise your post, do so in a comment first to make sure there are no negative effects on the answers. If you have sufficient rep, you can post the revision as a comment. We have been working with the Ministry of Education since January 2011 and have implemented a series of innovations in the name of speedier admissions. Our year-long pilot was deemed successful and we have been asked to continue these innovative initiatives with the broadest impact from the MIE. We have been given the mandate to make the entire admission process more transparent, efficient and effective, in and out of the exam hall. To that end, we have developed our new smartphone app that will enhance your student's experience by making the entire application process easier and faster. Please note that this app is currently in beta and does not contain all the features that will be available in the final version. By using this app, the applicant is exempt from the waiting

It would be great to have the server support JSONP so that I can do queries like: [mysql server]/rest/resource?q=find+me+by+my+id+and+include+children+in+the+JSONP+result Which would return jsonp-encoded results that include all child records. I'm running on.NET and MySQL. Update: Looks like
