Q: Is there a way to prevent the "Service cannot be activated" error in asp.net? I'm building an asp.net web application. I'm having a problem with the web service that I need to use. When I try to use a simple web service, say for example, me@gmail.com, I get the error "The system cannot find the file specified". But when I use a web service that has been deployed to the server, that error goes away. Is there any way to prevent this message from coming up on the page? A: You can have a web.config file in the root of your website and set the following attribute under the sessionState element: Even if you try to use session variables, all you get is the default "Anonymous" login. A: The system cannot find the file specified error occurs when a file is requested that is not located on the web server. It could be because there is a rule in your IIS configuration file that does not allow the web service to access the file.
