I want to fill in the list based on the number of times each number appears in the array, but I'm not sure if I can do that without an if/else loop. import random # the list blackList = ["elephants", "pigs", "cats", "dogs", "monkeys"] # the array of sentences sentences = ["This is an elephant. Elephant is a animal."] # how many times each number appears in sentences numberOfTimes = [5, 2, 3, 3, 2] A: This is a recursive approach. If you're using Python 3, there's already a built in function to handle recursion, called count(). import random # the list blackList = ["elephants", "pigs", "cats", "dogs", "monkeys"] # the array of sentences sentences = ["This is an elephant. Elephant is a animal."] def count(i
