But I'm really liking the idea of the second edition; it seems like if players don't want to buy the first edition as a board game, they have the option of getting the second edition as either a board game or an RPG. I believe that the only reason the second edition got scrapped was because MSRP for the first edition was ridiculously high. If they lowered the prices to around $60 I think they might have a fighting chance of making the second edition happen, but I definitely don't think it's worth screwing up the first edition by just scrapping it and re-releasing it. The only reason they scrapped the second edition was because the first edition sold horribly. About how many copies did the first edition sell? I love the first edition and I am itching to get my hands on the second edition. I don't care to see the second edition come out as it would be like trying to replace the original Star Wars trilogy. I love the original trilogy.Rand Paul accuses Hagel of being 'uninformed' on Iran Below: Next story in Politics Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., talks with a reporter after he voted to confirm Nominee for Secretary of Defense Chuck Hagel in the Dirksen Senate Office Building in Washington, Monday. WASHINGTON — Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., on Monday accused Defense Secretary nominee Chuck Hagel of having a "prejudice" against Iran, a charge Hagel said he did not know was directed at him. The senator from Kentucky's floor speech came just before the Senate cleared the way for Hagel to be confirmed, with a 90-to-9 vote. Paul offered no evidence of Hagel's alleged prejudice, saying the nominee was merely selected to oppose the Iranian regime and that he would be unable to be objective. "I have great concern that he has a prejudice towards the entire Middle East, and I think he is unqualified to serve," Paul said. Hagel, a former Republican senator from Nebraska who is now an Obama appointee, said he was shocked by Paul's statement.
