(KOIN) — A man who had been living at a homeless camp with his wife and two kids was found dead in a parking lot Tuesday morning. Homicide detectives found the body of 39-year-old Carlos Muñoz-Luna in the parking lot of an apartment complex near the intersection of Columbia and 79th in Northeast Portland. They say it's unclear how he died. Homicide detectives say at first, they thought it was a suicide, but after they spoke with the man's wife, she told police that they had been arguing over drugs on Tuesday, September 26. According to the wife, the husband had been using methamphetamines. Police found a loaded handgun and several knives in the man's tent. They later found an additional handgun at the scene. His wife was able to get the guns and hide them. Homicides in Portland have been on the rise this year. In August, the Portland Police Department responded to 471 homicides — an average of 1 every 48 hours — which is about one more than the average number of homicides in a given year. The American Statesman has compiled a list of homicides since January on the streets of Portland, including a dashboard camera video of a man on the street in March just before he
