[More information on Photoshop.com] A picture may also refer to the thing that the picture is a picture of. For example, an image can be a picture of myself. But it can also be a picture of my laptop. It's common parlance to say that an image has been "photoshopped," or even just "shopped," meaning that it's been edited or manipulated. In today's world, a picture may or may not be worth a thousand words. Almost every other day, someone tweets a picture of something exciting, often a death or a birth, and with it, all we need is a few words to describe it. But that's not the case in the "real" world, where a picture is more than just a pretty face — it's about to tell the story of someone's life, give you insights into how the other person is thinking about you and create a conversation. In the not too distant future, we may not have computers on which to access these sites; however, we might have a series of sensors that tell us when someone has died, or a companion robot that will deliver a message to the bereaved and add them to a virtual community. Social media is a beautiful thing. It allows us to connect with people we might never have met in our lives. It allows us to share the interesting things we find, to lend a helping hand to those in need, to befriend the oddball or the funny. But just as everyone has trouble blocking out distractions while they're trying to get work done, it's a challenge to keep up with an influx of new friends and interesting contacts. So the next time you're thinking about posting a picture of the latest gadget or Instagramming a family picture, think about whether this is something you want to post on a site that has tens or hundreds of thousands of people looking at it. A picture may also refer to the thing that the picture is a picture of. For example, an image can be a picture of myself. But it can also be a picture of my laptop. "Photo" is not just a noun. It also describes a photo, so anything that is of a photo is a photo. Photoshop is a system for retouching graphics. There is no substitute for using this system to alter images of real things to make them look like they are not real things. It may look

Carl Olsson Andersson Carl Olsson Andersson (2 July 1783 – 11 June 1843) was a Swedish genre painter. He belonged to the animalier painters from the late classical Swedish national romanticism. Biography He was born in Linköping in Småland, the son of the painter Nils Andersson and the sister of the painter Ernst Andersson. He received his art education in Stockholm and Paris, where he made the acquaintance of the French animalier artist Jean-Étienne Liotard. He studied in Paris with Jean-Baptiste Debret, Eugène Guillaumin and Jean-Michel Moreau le prieur before traveling to Italy in the spring of 1805. There, he visited Rome, Florence, Venice and the Italian lakes, after which he returned home, getting married in Riddarhuset in Stockholm in the spring of 1811. Shortly after his return he became a member of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences. Between 1818 and 1843, he was responsible for the painting of the ceiling and decorations for the drawing room of the Royal Swedish Academy, including three scenes from the history of Sweden's olden times. He also participated in numerous international exhibitions in Paris. His works from this period include: The martyrs and confessors of Stockholm The Fall of the patriarch Charles XI (1817) Finnish women and children at their cottage (1828) The hall in Lidköping town hall (1831) The Bay of Bornholm (1833) The Fall of the patriarch Johann III (1840) His religious painting was inspired by Vibert's "View of the interior of the Monastery of Saint Sebastien in Siena" (1816-1817), a work that influenced modern Italian art. He was also a major influence on Gustav Ejstesen, one of the founders of Nordic art in the Nordic countries.
