@ 1.0: Retreating a Jack of All Trades Thanks to Bob for the tip. Should you wish to follow the details, it's here on Matthew B. Long's latest correspondence: I've spent many, many hours in front of my screen today as I've poked around the experimental art projects at the Occupy Wall Street encampment along the front of the New York Stock Exchange. While Occupy continues to be about what it means to be an American, all of these projects are about what it means to be an artist, including the Common Ground series by Ira Lightman where people have created shantytowns on top of the fence. One of my favorite projects, however, has been a series of paintings on lightbox canvases. They happen to be named Occupy. Each painting is made by a different artist. I was especially interested in an artist's statement written by Elizabeth Gilbert, which was among the first things I saw as I walked toward my fort. The White Walls Project arrived at #WhiteWallsNYC exactly one year ago today, when 9 artists, with help from a global community of communicators, family members and supporters, occupied the north side of the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) building for ten months, painting the space white between 1 April and 30 November 2011. The project survived its month-and-a-half stay in the building, and it also survived more than a year of completion delays, graffiti and anxiety about the future. The project was well-connected to the Occupy movement and to the international Occupy movement. Working with Occupy communications teams, the White Walls crew created a brand for the project. They never shared an overarching message or even a name for the project, but they were very, very clear about working within an evolving framework and respecting all information coming from the Occupier to the Occupier. Over a large part of the year, the project experienced the daily ups and downs of the Occupy movement, without becoming tied to the movement. There were frequent meetings with Occupy New York and with many Occupy groups around the world. The arrival of the 9 participants for the 12-week summer 2012 series was timed to parallel the arrival of the 2,500 or so ex-home-owners and landlords who were joining the Occupy movement for the first time. In August 2012, 1000 homes and a

Deserted is an action adventure with light RPG elements. We are a small team, and the whole experience has been very nice and positive. We have been really welcomed by the great community, and getting feedback and support on the forums and other platforms. Your help is appreciated. Deserted is a handmade experience, inspired by the alien atmosphere of Out of this World. The game features an approach to detail and art style that drives away from the random generation and scaling of other games. Fully hand-crafted objects, environments, characters, scenarios and bosses. It is a mix of survival, action, roleplaying and strategy elements in a procedurally generated world. To learn more about the roots of Deserted, check out the link below: To learn more about Deserted check out the following links: ExperienceDeserted, a hand crafted survival game where you crash land in a planet ravaged by time and forgotten technologies. You start your journey with only your name your weapon and unarmed as yours is the last ship to ever fly. From the immense ocean to the alien landscapes, you'll get to uncover your past and find out who you are.. who they were.
