I accidentally added 20 emails to dropbox, and now I want them gone. All I can do is restore from dropbox. Is there any other way to delete them? And I don't see a trash can or anywhere where I can manually delete them. I have the latest version of chrome. A: You can restore from Dropbox to a previous state (say, the last week), which deletes the email. There's also a (hidden?) button in the footer that will allow you to delete emails. The first time you click it, it will prompt you to confirm. AT&T and Verizon have been secretly "penetrating" into our cellular networks to secretly track our locations by harvesting information about our activity, as documented by the Electronic Frontier Foundation. EFF has published research (PDF) revealing a series of undisclosed business agreements between AT&T and Verizon and six other major cell carriers around the world, which together "allow them to obtain information about their customers' location and movements from over 200 cell towers and other pieces of equipment inside AT&T's and Verizon's networks." The major carriers maintain their operating systems, which collect subscriber information and usage data. The carriers share this information with each other. A kind of faux data brokerage,
