in both acute and chronic forms. Tempol (4-hydroxy-2,2,6,6-tetramethylpiperidine N-oxyl) is a chemical used as an antioxidant that mimics superoxide dismutase in scavenging free radicals.

This product is used in pharmacology and neuroscience research, but there are no published studies on the use of tempol in treatment of neurodegenerative diseases. We evaluated the effects of tempol in vitro and in vivo on oxidative stress-related parameters, such as reactive oxygen species (ROS), nitric oxide (NO) levels, and MDA levels, and on apoptosis-related parameters, such as mitochondrial membrane potential ( $\Delta\Psi_m$ ), Bax and Bcl2 expression, cytochrome c, cleaved caspase-3, and caspase-3 levels. Our results show that tempol treatment decreases ROS and NO levels, and MDA levels. In addition, tempol also increases  $\Delta\Psi_m$ , Bcl2 expression, and inhibits the expression of Bax and cleaved caspase-3 in a PC12 cell line exposed to glutamate and in a rat model with quinolinic acid-induced damage. Thus, tempol may have therapeutic potential for the treatment of neurodegenerative diseases by providing a neuroprotective effect.

latter being associated with esophageal stricture or esophageal atresia (Fessler operation), the presence of a pseudocyst must be considered in the differential diagnosis of abdominal abscess. After total gastrectomy, the use of a nonabsorbable clip to prevent pancreatic leakage is not sufficient to isolate a pseudocyst from the pancreatic juice and should be reconsidered. Other operations, either gastric or non-gastric (visceral resection), may be performed in this exceptional case. The risk of septicaemia, associated with the use of 6d1f23a050
