The owner can either be a thread or a process (I prefer it to be a process, as one of the benefits is that it simplifies the memory management). If you start a lot of workers you need to provide a lot of memory, so ideally one would prefer to either use the same amount of memory for all workers, or not use any memory at all, e.g. using the unix pipe to share memory between workers. > > -Andreas -- To unsubscribe, e-mail: For additional commands, e-mail: Q: Use of persistent free space in Linux ext4 file system In FreeBSD 8.
