Egypt: Sinai militant group opposes al-Qaida-backed 'coup' An Egyptian security official says the extremist group Ansar Bayt al-Maqdis has threatened to sever ties with al-Qaida-linked militants who overthrew President Mohamed Mursi's government in 2013. In a statement published on social media on Tuesday, the group said it would continue fighting "crusaders" until they withdraw from Egypt. It called on its followers to stop cooperating with them and to attack them, following an order given by al-Qaida leader Ayman al-Zawahiri. The Islamic State group has claimed responsibility for two bombings that killed at least 33 people and wounded more than 100 in Sinai last month. The attacks have intensified concerns that the region has become a battlefield between groups who claim allegiance to al-Qaida. an exposed state. The test pad can be formed as a unified block with the standard pads using e-beam evaporation process, and can be evaporated and patterned together with the standard pads by using a single mask. Alternatively, the test pad can be formed independently on the substrate by masking and etching processes, and can be electrically connected through a diffusion layer to the standard pads, thus forming a test pad. In a second aspect of the present invention, the diffusion layer can be formed as a P+ diffusion layer so that the gate of the high threshold voltage NMOS transistor is connected with the connection node of the test pad.
