A: This is because of the space in your formula - it's getting split up by your line breaks. If you just copy the line below to the clipboard and save it, edit it, then paste it into your file, it should work fine. This is not a very long formula, but there is more than enough to contain it - it should not even make the amount of space it's taking up. If it does, you may need to expand the formula by + (or another amount). SE is a weird way of writing = so you'll need to replace the spaces with the correct punctuation. =IF(OR(E3>-1000,E30,IF(E4>0,E3-I3,0))) Bonding of methacrylate acrylic monomers to enamel, dentin and bond-strengthening composite materials. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of different acrylate monomers on the bond strength of methacrylate composite resins to enamel, dentin, and a bond-strengthening composite material. Three methacrylate monomers (methacrylate, HEMA, and butyl methacrylate) were investigated as potential primers for methacrylate composite resins. The bond strengths of these monomers to enamel, dentin, and a second generation bond-strengthening composite measured. The bond strengths were measured by shear fracture of the prepared surfaces in resin composite. The 1-10-5 (methacrylate) and 2-5-2 (butyl methacrylate) monomer systems provided the highest bond strengths to both enamel and dentin. The bond strengths of both monomer systems to bond-strengthening composite were lower than those observed with enamel or dentin, but higher than the bond strengths to methacrylate composite resin monomer self-primers or previous investigations using methacrylate monomer self-primers as bonding agents. [Clinical observation of repeated chorioamnionitis]. To observe the frequency of and causes for repeated chorioamnionitis (RCA) and factors which may cause RCA. Clinical data from 8 184 cases of non-induced labour patients of Yamaguchi University Hospital between January 2011 and December 6d1f23a050
