In the art of measuring pressure or force at a distance from the measuring device, the measuring device can employ optic nerve fibers to transfer the pressure information to a monitoring device. In this approach, light is transmitted along the optic nerve to the retina at the back of the eye and the variations in the perceived light intensity at the retina can be used to detect and determine the magnitude and direction of pressure applied to the optic nerve. A device for measuring stress in this manner is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,296,992. In addition to the application of measuring pressure or force, it is also possible to transmit signals to the 6d1f23a050
