Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for detecting a display position, for example, an apparatus for detecting a display position of a vehicle like that disclosed in Japanese Patent Publication (Kokai) No. 11-298916. 2. Description of the Related Art As a result of the spread of the global positioning system (GPS) and the widespread use of navigation equipment, map information useful for vehicle running navigation can be obtained from a GPS satellite or the like. Thus, navigation equipment which uses the obtained map information can be obtained. A navigation apparatus in the related art includes map information as shown in FIG. 9A as reference information (map information). FIG. 9A is a schematic diagram showing a map information distribution range. The following description takes as a typical example a case where a vehicle is running along the road (main land) A to B on the map shown in FIG. 9A. A GPS receiver carries out positioning by receiving radio waves from GPS satellites. The vehicle uses the obtained GPS data on its running position for running navigation as described below. In navigation, map information set as an initial condition is used as shown in FIG. 9B, and a vehicle position is matched with the map information to read out map information corresponding to the vehicle position from the map information. However, as shown in FIG. 9A, the vehicle running on the road A to B on the map (illustrated in black) is largely deviated from the center of the map, and a pedestrian (illustrated in white) crosses a border between the road A and the road B, as shown by a dotted line. Thus, the GPS data

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for locating an object in an image. 2. Description of the Related Art It is known that a location of an object in an image can be obtained by processing an image of the object. An image processing apparatus for detecting a motion vector of an object in a moving image includes an input device that receives a moving image and outputs moving image data. The image processing apparatus extracts a motion vector from moving image data of an inputted moving image based on a detection criterion, such as a sum of absolute values of correlation between neighboring pixels (e.g., see Patent Document 1). from a peer of 6d1f23a050
