A: Unfortunately, the web service currently has no mechanism for authenticating clients. To do so, you need to implement a custom authentication layer, on a different machine, over a network (so it can communicate with the web service, you need a web service client). Purification and characterization of exo-cellobiohydrolase I from the ruminal bacterium Selenomonas ruminantium. A two step purification procedure involving column chromatography on Celite and Sephadex G200 columns was employed to prepare exo-cellobiohydrolase I (EC 3.2.1.91) from the ruminal bacterium Selenomonas ruminantium. The purified enzyme had a molecular weight of 240 kDa and released glucose from amorphous cellulose, carboxy-methyl cellulose and phosphoric acid swollen cellulose (PA-cellulose). The enzyme was quite resistant towards the detergents Triton X-100, Tween-20 and Tween-80 and had relatively good stability at both alkaline and acidic pH. The exo-cellobiohydrolase I had endo-beta-1,4-glucanase and endo-1,4-beta-xylanase activities.
