all participants suggested that experimental sandboxes be evaluated to better understand the effectiveness of the approach in the public sector. krzysko recommended that all sandboxes be used to improve government's data-driven decisionmaking process, but the success of the experiment will ultimately depend on the level of engagement from government employees. two children are featured in the official video. the mother gives her children directions on how to use the app, which is accompanied by an orchestral soundtrack. the user-directed approach — and the app's interface — creates a valuable learning environment for children. if children accidentally fiddle with a system, a live operator will simply step in and take over. participants agreed that sandboxes can work, but many have challenges — both technical and social — when scaling them across organizations. even sandbox models that restrict access to a defined set of data and/or teams present challenges with network and infrastructure operations. most agreed that the hurdles surrounding sandboxes are still too high to consider a generalized rollout, but they should be addressed if the idea is to spread beyond current users. for example, sandbox1 could initially be reserved for scientific data. individual tracks for the data could then be introduced using the same process. you're trying to come up with that cool thing that somebody is trying to do in this room. which is amazing. well i'm trying to do something that is amazing too. so i'm trying to get them to use big data science things. and that's fun and exciting.

it's that you can use to share your stories, but you can also use it to create a platform to engage with people. people aren't just coming to your website. they're coming to your social media. they're coming to your email. they're coming to your social networks, so it's the easiest way to share your stories and get feedback, and provide a platform for people who would like to interact with you and help you out. i also like to make visual timelines. you know, i have my whole life from the time i was born to today, so i like to use that, whether it's my own or whether it's someone else's, to basically tell my story that way and see what works. i also like using things like sphero mini as a way to engage the younger kids. i like to do things like that. i would recommend to other teachers who are looking to do something a little different that you look around what you can do and look to those examples that are out there. i don't want to make any money off this video. i just want to help out. i want to help out the community. people come back and say, how can i get in touch? i'm always looking for ways to support you and to try to encourage people to come to you that's why we are releasing all of these videos and all of these resources and tips on our website. anybody can you can send us an email with any questions at 2kids1sandbox@gmail.com. each workshop offers participants the opportunity to network with other public servants, explore effective project management approaches and techniques, and share their expertise with one another, not to mention learn how to build a budget in excel and work with basic data management techniques. the workshops are offered at no cost to participants and are delivered remotely. 5ec8ef588b
