Nero 8.3.2.1 Micro Express And Burning Rom Free Download ~UPD~

i use it to burn dvd's and mp4 files to a dvd for a dvd player that i have. it works great, and its free. i have used nero before and all i can say is that it is a rip off. i have been burned by nero many times before. they want so much money for updates to the product, and they only make a few minor changes in the software. if you are a video producer, or a video editor, you will be on your way to having a decent video editor, or a video editor. for the price, it is hard to beat. most companies out there charge you for updates. but dont' get burned by nero. it is really their fault for not making updates and bringing out a new edition every few months with a different price tag. i thought i might update from an earlier version of 7.xx since this one promises to be compatible with vista (should i decide to upgrade my os). i only install and use a few of the nero modules like cover editor, the burning modules, smart start and tools. so i opened smart start and chose to update as the fellow below so mockingly recommends. i was taken to a download site where i watched horrified as a 254 mb download was accomplished. then update uninstalled my existing version of nero and restarted my computer. then the update continued. when complete, the update had installed everything nero offers including every single module that i never wanted, had never installed before and would never use. so using the built in update routine may not yield the results you'd expect. i did a system restore from a backup i had made for this occasion and then visited the ahead site to download the 190 mb update module. this download, as it has in the past, let me choose the specific modules i wanted to install and all went well. this is nice software for sure but it sure beats you up when you update.

works as expected, except it fails to burn a few of my iso's -- and it takes over 20 minutes to burn an 8gb iso. i really just want the burner. nero recommends the installer (is this going to be included in the next version?) but does anyone want this in their windows or bootable usb? i'd rather not have a nero installer on my system and therefore set this app to be a part of my bootable usb. i've already started the install; i'll let you know. i have nero 8.3.2.1, and i'm still amazed how well it works. i haven't had anything come up that wasn't perfect yet, and i'm pretty good at burning, and i'm using a pc with 8gb of ram! i have a couple problems, though.. the first is that i have dual hard drive systems with a single optical drive in between, and the single optical drive will not accept disc's i burn for some reason. other than the fact that it's not formatted for cd's. this is a minor inconvenience, but makes re-buying an optical drive a little more expensive.

secondly, the program is completely crash prone for me. when i'm running a program, and i try to go to a local area on the map, it crashes and i have to copy the file, and then copy the file from a usb to the local area on the map, it crashes and put it to the map part. so i guess the final part. and then i burn the disc. no really, and it works flawlessly for me. finally, after my "friends" in nero told me i needed to update, i did (3) and they just keep updating more and more. the thing about it though, is that when i go to burn, it tells me i have to download the update.. and i do it. ok, fine, i get it, you're updating. now why in the world do you have a button that says "stop" when i am trying to burn when you are telling me to. do you know how frustrating it is that this is taking up a ton of time?? plus i gave my money and it is again costing me more time to update something i shouldnt have to download. i will never buy anything from "nero" again.
