The Guild II - Pirates Of The European Seas Patch

the black plague had a major impact on europe in the fourteenth century, but it was not an unstoppable, all-powerful monster. it was a disease of rats, which were a permanent part of european urban life, and it spread as people lived in close proximity. there were three major waves of the plague, and each caused millions of deaths. in the fifteenth century, the plague had largely disappeared from western europe, but in the sixteenth century, it would spread to the rest of europe, particularly in germany. in addition to regular epidemics of this disease, there were many more localized outbreaks which killed many more people. the sea of thieves has seen a lot of action in the last few weeks. while some of the action has been good for adventurers, some of it has not been good for adventurers. this patch focuses on making sure the first season of the great expedition goes smoothly for everyone and making sure a handful of issues are resolved before the end of the first season. the dev chat in the forums is now open and ready to discuss the new patch and answer any questions you may have. players should also be able to see all of the fixes in the game and changes made in the patch. sailors are gathered at the taverns and inns of velia and port epheria, looking for captains to head out to the great open seas. on the islands, papu and otter barterers are in position, competing against each other for resources and the attention of bartering adventurers. people adrift in the margoria sea, each with their own tales and sunken treasures are all looking to passing boats for rescue. the island of ouquillas eye has also made news recently as unfamiliar tidal currents are spewing from the island, displacing the great ocean creatures into unfamiliar territories. welcome to the great expedition. 5ec8ef588b
