A brief introduction: RssClient is designed to be able to work well with the RSS 2.0 specification. It provides a set of classes to help you implement a RSS client. The class library is available under the GNU GPL v2 license.

RssClient (An RSS Client) An RSS Client can be defined as a software that provides RSS feeds for end users to use. It can parse and display an RSS or Atom feed in an easy to use application. For example you might want to implement a news aggregator for a particular user, or a news reader for a group of people.

What can you do with RssClient?

- Download and parse RSS feeds
- Sorts RSS and Atom feeds by category, tag, author, date, last updated, title, content or popularity
- Downloads a particular feed
- Add a favorite link to a feed
- Add links to feeds so they open in the browser
- Sort your feeds by category, tag, author, date, last updated, title, content or popularity
- Add new feeds at any time
- View RSS feeds from a folder
- Manage your subscriptions
- View feed stats
- Manage your feeds

The RssClient classes are just a starting point for you to implement a complete RSS client. A good place to start is by looking at the class listing for a particular feed manager. I for example use RssClient to manage all my feeds. In my feed manager I have a MyFeed
