It is home to a wildlife sanctuary, the Visitor's Center, the Safari Riding Center, two golf courses, a marina, and restaurants. It is linked to the main island of Marco Island by a wide causeway crossing the Banana River. Geography Floribama is located at (26.910025, -82.441359). According to the United States Census Bureau, the island has a total area of, of which is land and is water. Floribama is a barrier island and a part of the Southwest Florida region. Floribama island is a sandy island, which means there is no real high elevations and none are needed to sustain the character of the island. History Floribama was once the center of the Civil War blockade in the Florida Straits. During the 1970s, real-estate developers began buying up large chunks of dry land on its eastern shore to build luxury vacation condominiums. By the mid-1990s, the island had undergone an unprecedented boom and many new high-priced homes had been built. However, due to the 2000 hurricanes, none of the new houses were completed and the enormous pools, tennis courts, and other expensive luxuries were left unfinished. By 2003, the island's once-popular real-estate market had lost so much of its appeal that only a few houses remained on sale. The loss of this real-estate boom is considered one of the reasons the Florida economy suffered a major loss in 2005. Environment Floribama is home to a number of animals, which include wild turkey, deer, coyotes, raccoons, bobcats, white and black bears, bobcats, alligators and various birds. Floribama is the only place in the world to have a native species of monkey - the gray-cheeked mangabey, which is found only in tropical, subtropical, or warm temperate forests. Floribama is also home to the only North American population of the palm mantis, or green mantis. The nature park at Floribama protects the
